ZANGEZI ist eine radikale, multimediale Neufassung von Velimir Chlebnikows visionärem, planetarischem Poem aus dem Jahr 1922. Unter der künstlerischen Leitung des international erfolgreichen Medienkünstlers Chris Salter in Zusammenarbeit mit einem internationalen Team aus renommierten Künstler:innen aus Musik, Bildender Kunst, KI, Performance und Technologie entsteht ein spektakuläres Multimedia-Event, in dem verräumlichter Sound, Licht, Musik, Graphik und KI-gesteuerte, mit einer Game-Engine-erzeugten Szenografie mit intensiver, physischer Schauspielkunst verschmelzen. Ein zentrales Element bei ZANGEZI bildet eine monumentale LED-Wand, die als visuelles und lichttechnisches Mittel fungiert. KI-gestützte Technologien und Game-Engine erschaffen damit neue digitale Landschaften, Charaktere und Klangwelten, die live mit den Darstellerinnen interagieren, um so Kunst, Technologie und Narrativ in einer einzigartigen »Supersaga in 20 Ebenen« eins werden zu lassen.

Dabei untersucht die Inszenierung zentrale Fragen unserer Zeit: das Spannungsfeld zwischen Mensch und Natur, die Macht der Sprache sowie Krieg und Konflikt als Motoren historischer Veränderungen.

Zangezi ist ein Gesamtkunstwerk, das, beeinflusst von bildender Kunst, Musik und Theater, Futurismus und Konstruktivismus, die Auflösung der epischen Erzählform in radikale Sprachexperimente feiert.

Im Mittelpunkt von Chlebnikows Werk steht der Prophet Zangezi, eine Mischung aus modernem Messias, Politiker und Guru. Zangezi ist in der Lage, mit den Vögeln, den Göttern, dem Kosmos zu kommunizieren. Im Stück versammeln sich die Massen in einem Bergwald, um Zangezis Predigten zu hören und zu versuchen, die Sprachen der übermenschlichen Welt zu verstehen. Auf seinem Berg stehend kommuniziert Zangezi zum Beispiel mit den Vögeln, die eine onomatopoetische Vogelsprache sprechen („Wjer-wjör wiru ssjek- ssjek! Wer-wer wiru ssek-ssek-ssek!“). Zangezi befindet sich außerdem im Kontakt mit den Göttern, die in einer unverständlichen Zungenrede singen („Mara-roma, biba-bull! Uks, kuks, el! Rededidi dididi! Piri-peppi, pa-pa-pi! Tschogi guna, geni-gan!“). Zangezi spricht in rhythmischen Versen, in einer sohaften, poetischen Sprache und in lyrischen Monologen („Ich, Schmetterling, der sich verflogen ins Zimmer eines Menschenlebens, soll die Schrift meines Staubs an den rauen Fernstern lassen...“).

Außerdem verwendet Zangezi eine „Sternensprache“ – eine Sprache, die aus Konsonanten und erfundenen Wörtern besteht, die nicht nur akustische Eigenschaften haben, sondern auch mit geometrischen Punkten im Raum verbunden sind. Diese Sternensprache ist das extremste Beispiel für das, was die russischen Futuristen Zaum nannten (ein russisches Wort, das mit „jenseits jeden Sinns“ übersetzt werden kann). Zaum zielte darauf ab, eine utopische, universelle Weltsprache zu schaffen – eine Sprache, die sich aus Klängen, Konsonanten, Anrufungen und Beschwörungsformeln zusammensetzt –, um die sprachlichen Trennungen zwischen den Nationen und Völkern aufzuheben.

Gleichzeitig suchte Chlebnikow sein ganzes, kurzes Leben lang nach algorithmischen Formeln, die zukünftige historische Ereignisse vorhersagen würden. Chlebnikow erkundete auf spielerische und poetische Weise mit Worten und Zahlen die Grenzen zwischen Sinn und Un-Sinn, Wahnsinn und Vernunft, Ordnung und Unordnung, ergebundener und kosmischer Erfahrung.

Zangezi sprüht und funkelt nur so vor Worten, die sich in ekstatische, kehlige Urlaute verwandelt haben und an den Anfang der Menschheitsgeschichte oder die erfundenen Sprachen von Kindern, in denen Sinne und Welt noch nicht durch rationales Denken voneinander getrennt sind, erinnern.

As a 2nd generation Taiwanese American (born 1976) living in Berlin, Audrey Chen's work continuously explores the displacement of story and history due to the migration and integration processes, loss and adoption of language, untold stories, and how the past can be accessed through inherited and lived experience. Her practice is deeply intertwined with this act of invocation, calling upon the physical body to remember beyond the limitations of its own memory. Through extreme, un-processed hyperextensions of her voice in tandem with the chaotic glitch of a Ciat Lonbarde "Fourses" synthesiser, she invokes a highly amplified joint resonant body/space transforming itself in a feedback loop of imagination, touch, vibration, sound and aural sensation. For over two decades, she has been touring extensively, appearing worldwide and aside from her solo concerts, Chen performs currently in her longest running duo project since 2005 with Phil Minton; as BEAM SPLITTER with trombonist Henrik Munkeby Nørstebø; as MOPCUT with Lukas Koenig and Julien Desprez; with electronic music artist Kaffe Matthews; with American sound artist Nick Klein and as a duo for voice/live digital process with Mexican sound artist Hugo Esquinca.

She has shown her work at festivals/venues such as: Festival Beyond Innocence (Osaka, JP), Maerzmusik, CTM Festival, Berghain, (Berlin, DE), Unsound Festival (Krakow, PL), 2PI Festival (Hangzhou, CN), Musique Actuelle de Victoriaville/FIMAV (CA), Festival Ecuatoriano de Música Contemporánea (Quito, Ecuador), Meteo Festival (Mulhouse, FR), Angelica Festival (Bologna, IT), Zacheta National Gallery (Warsaw, PL), Musée du quai Branly, Radio France (Paris, FR), Auditorio de Tenerife (Tenerife, ES), Teatro Colon (Buenos Aires, AR), Teatro Fondamenta Nuove (Venice, IT), DOM (Moscow, RU), Wien Modern, Wiener Konzerthaus (Vienna, AT), Lille Opera (Lille, FR) and Robert Wilson's Watermill Center (Water Mill, NY, US) among many others.

Writing for The Wire, Julien Cowlez describes her practice as »uncompromising and idiosyncratic music, tightly disciplined yet acoustically wild and heavy with implication. Her ultra-verbal vocalising, often reminiscent of the visceral and emotionally charged sound poetry of François Dufréne or Henri Chopin, exposes physiological aspects of utterance that are concealed within standardised articulation and day to day speech. Fleshy, breath-driven and flecked with spittle, Chen's voice emanates not just from her mouth but from an ensemble of upper body surfaces, channels, passages, and cavities.«

Low frequency sound artist Stefanie Egedy investigates sound as a composer of conceptual pieces, commissioned works, and electronic music. Focused on researching possibilities with low frequency sound, bodies, and subwoofers, her work stems from installations to live performances as sonic propositions, building a body of work called BODIES AND SUBWOOFERS (B.A.S.). Sub-bass, bass, infrasound, subwoofers, and their potential therapeutic effects (such as relaxation and the reduction of stress and anxiety), along with their capacity to permeate a space, form the core of her artistic practice. This foundation is enriched by examinations of the possibilities of interaction between human/architectural bodies and sound waves, using field recordings in conjunction with analog and digital synthesis. Immersed in this context, Egedy articulates the crossover between sonorous and musical language to investigate sonic communication between beings. Furthermore, Egedy co-founded and manages the label COISAS QUE MATAM (THINGS THAT KILL), researches light-sound relations with Camille Laurent, and has collaborated with Chris Salter, Alexis Blake, and Fernando Velázquez, among others. Stefanie Egedy has worked with and exhibited in contexts such as CTM Festival, Berghain, KW Institute for Contemporary Art, Heroines of Sound Festival, Tresor, Radialsystem, The Fairest at Trauma Bar, and MONOM in Berlin (DE), Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and Harvard University in Cambridge, MA, (USA), The High Line (New York City, USA), FIBER Festival (Amsterdam, NL), Sónar+D (Istanbul, TR), Kunstfest (Weimar, DE), HELLERAU - Hybrid Bienalle (Dresden, DE) Zentrale (Viena, AT), Lisboa Soa Festival (Lisboa, PT), Centro Pecci (Prato, IT), Una Boccata d'Arte at Fénis Castle (Valle d'Aosta, IT), Nextones Festival (Ossola Valley, IT), Patchlab Festival (Krakow, PL), WIELS (Brussels, BE), Museu de Arte Moderno (Buenos Aires, BR), Museu Paranaense (Curitiba, BR), in São Paulo (BR) at MIS, Museu da Imagem e do Som, and Festival Novas Frequências (Rio de Janeiro, BR). In 2017, Stefanie attended an artist residency at Red Bull Station in São Paulo, where she returned to give a lecture in 2019, and in 2024 she was awarded a grant for the Sound Art Lab Residency in Streuer, Denmark.
